Camino de Santiago, Northern Route

The Facts

A 7 night self-guided section of the renowned Camino de Santiago along its lesser-frequented Northern Route. It follows the breathtaking Basque coastline before heading inland to some stunning countryside for the last two days. You start at the old city gates of Hondarribia and finish at historical Guernika with your final night in either San Sebastian or Bilbao. You will stay in a mix of charming coastal and rural hotels and have your luggage moved on for you each day.

Terrain

The route varies from well-trodden footpaths, to farm tracks, and woodland paths, which are generally good underfoot and you can make good pace. All are well way marked and easy to navigate. There are a few stonier and paved sections as well as patches of mud that can be slippery after rainfall, but nothing too difficult.

Although the highest point during the week is only 500 metres, like most coastal paths the route undulates and the accumulated ascent adds up by the end of the day. Despite being coastal, there are no sections of exposure to speak of. Some of the stages are long but you cover the distance easier than you would in our more alpine and mountainous resorts. Ascents and descents tend to be fairly gentle and not too prolonged and knee crunching.

Grade :	Moderate and long
Walking Time :	5 - 8 hours
Ascent :	485m to 970m each day
Descent :	500m to 850m each day

Please note that walking time does not include time taken for rests or lunch breaks and is an indication of how long the walking itself will take.
